Strike Leaders Plan New Drives Textile Disputes

Many Mills Intend to Re-open Under Guard of Soldiers

2nd WEEK OF TURMOIL

Efforts Toward Settlement Apparently at Stand Still Monday

WASHINGTON. — (AP) — Renewed picketing drives were planned by strike leaders in the nation's textile industry Monday as many mill owners reported their intention of reopening plants under military protection.

Efforts toward a settlement of the controversy were at a standstill as the strike entered its second week after the manufacturers had rejected an arbitration proposal by labor.

Francis J. Gorman, national strike leader, had proposed that the mediation board headed by Governor John C. Winant of New Hampshire summon George A. Sloan, head of the textile institute, and other employers' representatives, while Gorman and union leaders would represent labor. Sloan termed the proposals "of a character that makes them utterly impossible from every standpoint."

Sloan met with the mediation board today to continue the manufacturers' side of the conflict.

In the southern textile centers, additional national guardsmen were on duty at many mills as employers were ready to reopen their mills North and South Carolina were joined by Mississippi in calling out guardsmen.

Union leaders lined up new "flying squadrons" of pickets for attempts to keep the mills closed and shut down additional ones.

Southern strike headquarters in Greenville, S. C., said governor Ibra C. Blackwood's proclamation against unlawful assemblages in South Carolina would not stop "flying squadrons" from visiting the mills.

In New England centers, reinforced guards stood at the mill gates in anticipation of new attempts by picket groups to close the plants. Police in many textile communities announced they would protect workers who desired to work.

Two States Title Goes to Atlanta

Rabbits Defeat Transporters 8 to 3 in Fifth Game of Series

TEXARKANA. — The Atlanta Rabbits were crowned Two States League champions for 1934 Sunday afternoon following their decisive 8 to 3 defeat of the Southwestern Transporters of this city in the fifth and deciding game of the play-off series.

His which hits meant runs along with good pitching by Bernard Henderson brought victory to the Cass county team. Henderson, whose victory Sunday, was his second in the series, was joined in the heroes circle however, by Budgie Hanner, young Rabbit third sacker whose home run in the seventh inning with McGivray on base supplied the finishing touches to the Atlanta victory.

Henderson, regularly an outfielder, on the Rabbit club and a former member of the Brooklyn Dodgers held the entire game, scattering their six hits and bearing down effectively in the pinches. He disposed of six of the Southwesterners by the strike out route and went the entire game without issuing a base on balls.

Added to the combination of hitting and pitching, itself an almost unbeatable combination, was four costly transporter errors that resulted in the same number of runs.

Patmos Students to Classify Friday P. M.

Patmos school students will classify Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock. At that time book lists will be given out.

Children who will be six years of age before January 1 must enter within two weeks of school opens.

Work is now under way on hard-scaping the school ground, plans for which were furnished by George Ware, assistant director in charge of the fruit and truck branch experiment station.

The labor is being furnished through the FERA.

Italian experts say their recent army maneuvers show that assault by fast tanks and swift-moving shock troop detachments will break and trench line and force the fighting out into the open.

Britain creates its first permanent tank brigade. France studies the movement of troops by airplane, and American authorities agree that the trench warfare is probably a thing of the past.

All this reflect the force which new inventions are exerting. The whole science of warfare seems about to swing on one of these pivots which human ingenuity provides every few centuries; and while weapons are becoming ultra-scientific, the military art itself may be reverting to the conditions of bygone centuries.

It is possible, that is, that we are going back to a relatively small, highly professionalized army such as was the vogue for centuries prior to the French Revolution.

For a long, long time before that, the mass army which depended on sheer weight of numbers for its triumph was practically unheard of. Even the largest nations had small armies, by modern standards.

Military science was formalized and delicate. It took years to create a professional soldier; one created, however, was invincible to all opponents, except those as fully trained as himself.

Then came the French Revolution, and the application of conscription. Time and again the French defeated better troops by the simple process of overwhelming them with numbers.

The art of war changed. Armies grew enormously. Numbers became more important than professional skill. This condition lasted to the present day. But the tide began to turn several years ago. The machine gun gave on man the fire-power of a company; the airplane became more potent than the cavalry regiment; the tank acquired the hitting power of the brigade.

The result has been to lessen the importance of mere size. As things are now, the strength of an army depends on the equipment and training and not on its size. Because of that it may be that we shall never again see armies as gigantic as those of the World war.

And that, in its turn, would mean that the frightful mass slaughter of 1914-1918 would not be duplicated.

Earle W. Evans, of Wichita, president of the American Bar Association, deserves the thanks of the country for his ringing demand that the bar institute a vigorous campaign against the crooked lawyer.

"The criminal lawyer," he declares, "is an offensive creature, usually to be found in the large centers of population, who advises clients how to commit crimes with the minimum risk of detection."

This is true enough; and it might be added that some of our most dangerous lawbreakers would have been juggled long ago if some of our unscrupulous lawyers had not been willing to use any and all means to keep the most of jail.

Such lawyers of course are numerically, of course, an insignificant group in the country's bar. The things they do, however, have a far-reaching head of the country's bar association head of the country's bar association is alive to the harm they will do and is determined to stamp them out.

If you have ever doubted that the strike is the most expensive way of settling labor disputes, you might want the figures presented by the Minneapolis Junior Chamber of Commerce, dealing with the recent truck strike in that city.

Fire Destroys Liner, Scores Are Dead

Bob Chamberlain Dies Saturday

Short Illness Proves Fatal to Hope Man—Buried Sunday

R. L. (Bob) Chamberlain, 53, died in Julia Chester hospital Saturday night after a short illness. He was taken to the hospital for an operation, but died before it could be performed.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock from the family residence on East Second street, with the Rev. E. C. Rule, pastor of First Methodist church, officiating. The body was buried in Rose Hill cemetery.

Surviving are his widow, two brothers, Bert of Hope and Richard of Haysville, La.

Born in Columbus, Mr. Chamberlain spent practically his entire life in Hempstead county. He was well known in Hope, having been engaged in the carpenter, contractor and beer stand business.

U. S. Inquiry Is Launched in Fire Luxurious Liner

Incendiary Is Suspected by Chief Officer of Morro Castle

OTHERS TO TESTIFY

Dock Hand Will Give Version of Disaster—Death List Is Reduced

ASBURY PARK, N. J. — (AP) — A terrific blast which sent sparks and flaming cinders high in the air Monday prevented searchers from boarding the hull of the Morro Castle, liner which caught fire Saturday, causing loss of more than a hundred lives.

Firemen had planned to board the ship and use hose to extinguish the fire.

Cause of the explosion has not been determined. Two bodies, both of them men, washed upon the shore Monday.

A second explosion occurred about half an hour after the first blast, again sending a shower of sparks and cinders into the air.

Meanwhile a government inquiry into the fire was begun at New York. Arson Theory Given Chief Officer William F. Warms, master of the ship at the time of the fire, told the inquiry board that he suspected the blaze was started by an incendiary.

Warms said he based his belief on the fact that an incendiary attempt was made on the boat on its previous voyage.

He also thought significant the fact that the blaze was discovered in the ship's locker which "blew out" at the start of the fatal fire.

When, speaking about the earlier fire, Warms said "someone set it." Inspector General Dickerson N. Hoover of the steamboat inspection service, asked, "how do you know?"

"I found charred paper on the cargo," he said.

The company's formal report of that fire, produced at the hearings, agreed with the details of the chief officer's story.

"I think somebody put something in that locker that burned and smoldered fire a long time," Warms testified.

"It smoked, and we saw that smoke first, and then it burst into flames."

"Any other place?" asked Hoover.

"The only other place seemed to be the lounge."

"Then," said Hoover, "you base your belief that the fire was set on your previous experience and the fire in the locker?"

"Yes sir."

"Do you think that lightning hit the ship?"

"That was not true."

Deck Hand to Testify

William O. Sullivan, a deck store keeper, says he intends to tell the federal steamship inspectors that no water came out of the fire hoses of the vessel when the crew attempted to fight the fire.

He also said he intended to tell them that the crew members were orphans and that weekly fire drills had not been properly carried out.

The revised list shows the casualties in the Morro Castle tragedy stand at 73 identified dead, 27 missing passenger, and 31 missing of the crew for a total of 131.

The identified dead included Capt. Robert Willmott, whose body has not been recovered. He died of heart disease before the Morro Castle caught fire.

Another Ship "Fired"

BALBOA. — (AP) — Several officers of the Grace liner Santa Rica, which made port here Monday with fire in its hold, declared after docking that "the fire here and also on the Morro Castle was the work of an international radical organization."

HAVANA. — (AP) — Captain Oscar Hernandez, chief of the Havana port police, declared Monday "that the Morro Castle fire seems to have been the work of Communists, apparently of a passenger who boarded the ship with fire-making chemicals in his baggage."

Federal Grand Jury to Take Up 100 Cases

FORT SMITH, Ark. (P) — More than 100 cases involving alleged violations of federal statutes will be laid before the federal grand jury when it convenes here Monday.

Monday and Tuesday have been set aside for consideration of cases in the Fort Smith division. These include 27 alleged violations of the internal revenue laws in regard to liquor, in addition to 20 other cases.

The grand jury will take up cases from the Harrison division Wednesday, which includes five cases concerning liquor and 13 other cases.

Cases from the Texarkana and El Dorado division will be studied Thursday and Friday, and if necessary, Saturday. There are 12 liquor cases and 11 others from the Texarkana division, and 10 liquor and five miscellaneous ones from the El Dorado section.

Tests Show Diseases Due to Vitamin Loss

You probably are well aware by this time that a complete absence of certain vitamins from your body will bring about certain diseases. The names of these diseases have been definitely coupled with these vitamin deficiencies.

Other diseases probably are associated with moderate deficiencies of the vitamins, and there are doubtless breakdowns of the tissues and functions of some parts of the body which can be attributed to these deficiencies.

One expert has listed four signs which indicate whether any disease is due to lack of a specific vitamin.

The first of these is that the condition in question must disappear wholly or in part when the vitamin is taken. This will not occur if serious damage to the tissues has already taken place. It will not occur if the body cannot absorb the vitamins, and it will not occur if the condition is due to several deficiencies and only one is corrected.

For example, it is now well established that defective teeth will develop if the body receives insufficient calcium, insufficient phosphorus, and insufficient vitamin C and D. The supplying of any one of these deficiencies will not correct the condition.

The second sign of a vitamin deficiency disease is that the giving of the vitamin will prevent development of the disease.

The third sign or test is that it must be shown that some other substance given with the vitamin is not bringing about the beneficial result.

The third sign or test is that it must be shown that some other substance given with the vitamin is not bringing about the beneficial result.

For example, it is now believed that vitamin B has a favorable influence on digestion and nutrition. If vitamin B is given in a preparation containing sugar, the benefit to nutrition might be due to the sugar.

The last test concerns investigations of tissues and of symptoms which reveal themselves early, before the severe disease occurs. For example, mild disturbances of vision and night blindness may appear before the serious condition called xerophthalmia occurs, when there is a lack of vitamin A.

With the X-ray it is possible to see the earliest signs of rickets, a condition affecting the growth of the long bones, due to a deficiency of vitamin D, long before the deficiency is observed in the form of bow-legs.

You must remember that our knowledge of vitamins is, after all, comparatively recent. Hardly 20 years have passed since this conception was first brought to light.

With the great many studies now being made in laboratories throughout the world, it is likely that much additional information of value will soon become available. Particularly important in this connection is the fact that certain vitamins are now isolated in pure form.

While it may not be necessary to take these vitamins into the body in pure form, the use of these in experimentation will yield much valuable information.

Lived With Eskimos a Year—and Liked It—Scientist Tells of Stay on Lonely Arctic Island

By BRUCE CATTON

Spending a year on a lonely island in the Arctic, learning to eat raw fish and seal blubber and bunking in unventilated igloos with Eskimos, may not look like the most ideal assignment possible.

But George Miksch Sutton tried it, and enjoyed every minute of it, and his book, "Eskimo Year," in which he describes his experiences, is little less than a long paean in praise of that kind of life.

Mr. Sutton went to Southampton Island, at the mouth of Hudson Bay, to collect bird and animal specimens. There was a tiny trading post there and a native settlement. He installed himself there, and when he was not out collecting specimens he was making friends with the Eskimos.

He found these stone age folk slightly modified by contact with civilization. They wore suspenders, for instance, and white man's boots, and they used Canadian canoes instead of the traditional kayaks.

Basically, however, they were the

YOUR CHILDREN
By Olive Roberts Barton

The clapper has been oiled and the old bell rope replaced. Windows have been given their annual polish and ink spots have been scrubbed off the desks.

Waste baskets are ready for purloined gum and crumpled papers. The pencils are sharpened and piles of books in new jackets are stacked on the front seats.

Another school term is at hand! The children are grumpy. Every time they hear the fire siren they hope it is headed toward the school building. They pile up hope against hope that something will happen to prevent the inevitable. They examine throats carefully searching for spots, or complain of aches, pains and fevers. They just don't want to go back to school and that's all there is to it.

No more lying in bed and eating cereal out of a box at ten o'clock. No more baseball, or swimming or biking when they please.

No more anything!

Vacation Becomes Boring

They forget that the lot on the corner hasn't seen one of them for weeks, that the bathing suits have dangled jadedly on the lines as dry as punk since a week ago last Wednesday, and that the bikes have needed exercise for days on end.

The truth is that for quite some time back they haven't have an iota of an idea about what to do with themselves. At this stage of the game, the very best thing that can happen is the saving clang of the school bell.

Man cannot live forever without system, responsibility, and regimentation. He not only goes to seed in an irresponsible world but he gets tired of choosing his own path. And children are the same.

Farm Life Different

In the old days when nearly all children lived in the country their daily tasks were discipline enough. But today's child would soon become a drifter were it not for the systematic routine of school life and its daily responsibilities.

So don't feel too sorry for him. He will get going. After two or three days or a week with very few exceptions he will be not only contented but have an expression of purpose in his face, a look of belonging, of occupying a place in a world of his own.

It is a good feeling as well as a necessary one.

The listless mind deteriorates in time. At first it sends out warnings in the form of contrariness, ill-humor and disobedience. It keeps up its morale as long as play engages its interest. This interest gone, it has nothing to feed on and it reverts to the primitive.

Need Outside Stimulus

If the mind were not hauled out of its bog forcibly it would rapidly degenerate into permanent lethargy. Only a few could or would survive. The majority need the outside fillip to save them.

A physical reason in favor of lessons and school life, as apart from the psychological, is the need for brain exercise, as well as body exercise, to balance health and growth. It has been proved that blood brought to the brain through study (not over-study) is as necessary to long life as blood coursing strong through the muscles.

The children are being saved in spite of themselves, and all in all, let us hope that the fire-siren does not mean the school-house.

Brazil went in for wine production when European tariffs cut down her coffee exports, producing 39,000,000 gallons in 1933.

A smoke bomb which sets up a smoke screen 30 feet high over 20 acres, wards off frost and whose ammonium sulphate content aids fertilization, is widely used by French grape growers.

Some primitive, child-like folk they have always been—and, incidentally, Mr. Sutton found them very easy to get along with.

His book, as a result, makes pleasant reading. He tells about the Eskimos and about the limitless, windswept, and hauntingly beautiful Arctic country, about his trips into the interior, the making of snow igloos, the stories the Eskimos tell and what it is like to work in a temperature of 40 degrees below zero. "Eskimo Year" should give you a couple of very enjoyable evenings.

Published by Macmillan, the book sells for $3.

BEACH CLUB GIRL

MADE McELLIOTT

CHAPTER XXVIII

THE routine of the shop began again. Hurry, hurry, hurry. Hurry to the street car, to the time clock, to the washroom. Hurry to lunch, hurry back. Boots' 19th birthday passed almost without notice. If she paused to think about the day at all it was to reflect that she felt at least 10 years older.

Occasionally she saw Denis. These were the bright spots in her life. Denis was working hard on the book. He gave himself a daily stint and kept to it religiously. And there were, of course, parties to distract him. So it was only a rare glimpse of his charmed life that Boots observed. Now and then he spoke fleetingly of Kay. She was going to be something or other in the Beaux Arts Pageant. Faywit was going to paint her. Faywit thought her exquisite. Or Kay was flashing off to Paris for a brief business trip. "She's a tremendously clever business person. You'd never suspect it," Denis said innocently. Boots saw her name in the social lists. Miss Kathleen Chillingford "Kay Chillingford swished into the Stork Club the other night, very oo-la-la in a black net straight from the Rue de la Paix," wrote Willy Van Snyder in the Evening Streamer. Yes, Kay had a foot in both worlds. She was a success in business and a social light as well. It was merely because of this that Boots envied her. She assured her self of this fact a dozen times a day.

The Christmas rush was in full force now. The store was a night mare of hurried clerks and frantic shoppers, ragged lists clutched in gloved fingertips. Extra clerks were hired; new stock was crowded in. You ran from one place to another like a driven thing.

Christmas came. The day was a ghastly one for Boots. She had bought a scarf and some gloves and sent them to her mother. Until the very last moment she had an ex piring hope that her father would send for her, would ask her to come home for the holiday dinner. By he didn't. Mrs. Mooney looked in upon her about 12 on her way to "into church."

"We're having a turkey," she said robustly. "You must come and help us eat it."

It was so kind of her, Boots said but she was going to dine with some friends in Pelham. She told the lie bravely. Not even Mrs. Mooney should pity her.

After Mrs. Mooney had departed Boots dressed hastily with only a casual glance at herself in the mirror. If she had ever been thought pretty, she decided, she certainly had lost any claim to that distinction now. The delicate oval of her face was transparently pale; her eyes were ringed by shadows.

She went out into the snow encrusted streets. Church bells were ringing all along the way and she passed hurrying groups of people, bundle laden. It seemed to her that she was, in all the big strangely quiet city, the only person quite alone.

SHE wandered aimlessly over to Fifth Avenue, a slim figure in her dark blue coat, the fur collar pulled up snugly about her face. She would have a brief walk, she told herself. Later she would dim frugally at that little French restaurant near 10th street. She could not quite keep the tears from coming to her eyes. It was dreadful, dreadful to be alone in New York on Christmas Day.

And Denis who might have called... might have looked for her... had forgotten her. Not even a card.

She squared her shoulders resolutely, facing the wind.

The big car which had been traveling slowly near the curb drew up with a whine of brakes. She heard her name called in loud cheerful tones.

"Mrs. Laurel!"

Whirling, she faced the pleasant brown face, the sturdy figure of Edward Van Selver, muffled in a great overcoat.

"I thought it was you," he said with his old, boyish laugh. "I couldn't quite be sure. What luck! I was feeling forlorn as a stray sheep running along. Then I saw you and I wasn't quite sure..."

He was smiling her gently toward her. "Mrs. Mooney," he spoke, his big, gloved hand on her elbow. Boots pro tested faintly.

As that you must come along and have some chow with me," the young man stated firmly. "It would be a Christmas act. I was just about to go by throat out and eat it. I was so low."

His family, he said, was still away. He had refused half a dozen invitations for one reason or another. Now, on the great day, he was quite alone.

"But Denis..." Boots began casually.

"He's at a house party up near Tuxedo with Kay Chillingford and some people," Edward told her.

Her heart plunged sickeningly. It was nothing to her, she reminded herself sternly, if Denis spent all his time with Kay these days. Hadn't she known ages ago that he was in love with Kay? She, Boots, was the merest acquaintance. Besides she had sworn never to love another man. What Denis did was no earthly affair of hers.

Presently she found herself opposite Edward in a big, dim, softly lit restaurant with famous murals on the walls, with the traffic of Park Avenue slapping sedately below them. Edward ordered, consulted, laughed easily. He was a pleasant person to be with. Boots thought gratefully. She could pretend for a little while that she was really the old Boots Raeburn of Larchmont, not the meek, weary clerk of the chintzes at Lacy's.

SHE had not realized she was so hungry. Everything tasted de licious. Edward was the sort of young man who expects and gets perfect service. He was solicitous for her comfort. Would she like a footstool? Was that salad dressing to her liking? His father mixed a salad dressing like no other...

"It all tastes marvelous to me," Boots told him. "My regular haunt is the Coffee Pot."

Edward gave a great shout at this ingenious revelation.

"It is not," "Oh, but I assure you, it is. I'm a working woman you know."

"No, but seriously," he protested squaring about and facing her. "You have a family up in Westchester, haven't you? What are you doing, proving you can earn your own living? Come clean, my lass."

"I eloped," she told him, seriously. "They're awfully—awfully mad at me."

In spite of herself, her voice thickened and blurred, and the traitorous tears threatened to come.

"Husband dead, eh? Denis told me," muttered Edward, made uncomfortable by her show of emotion.

out those who got $101,000.

She nodded.

It's Christmas Day, and you're giving me a grand party and I cry on your shoulder. That's not fair."

She could not talk of Russ to him—or to anyone.

Her companion, who was grateful for the change in atmosphere, began willingly enough to describe his activities. He'd been skating a lot, out on the Island, he told her. They had a big freeze the week before. It was grand sport. He said, he wanted to know, if she was going to Lake Placid later for the winter sports. Perhaps she could come. Kay would be at the Tappens for one week-end, at least. And perhaps Denis. Why couldn't she come up, too? Elise Tappens was his cousin. She must meet Elise.

Boots liked all this. Of course she wouldn't be asked to the Tappens'. Of course she wouldn't see Placid. Still it was fun to be with Edward Van Selver and listen to his enthusiastic planning.

"That is, I suppose Denis and Kay will be there," Edward inter polated. "Unless they're married before that. In that case it'll prob ably be Bermuda..."

Boots scarcely heard the rest. Her head was swimming. Her heart had taken one sickening plunge. So it was as close as that, was it? Denis and Kay!

Well, it served her right for let ting herself think of Denis for a single minute. She had no dignity, no integrity. She had been Russ's wife a few months ago. Now, with a shock, she realized that already Denis mattered in her life.

Music Teacher Is Appointed Here

Art Publication Society Names Mrs. John Wellborn Instructor

The Art Publication Society, publishers of the Progressive Music Series, has announced that Mrs. John Wellborn is to be its authorized teacher in Hope.

This music series is a complete text work for piano study arranged in accordance with approved teaching principles. It consists of printed lessons, exercises, studies and compositions, all written and edited by master pianists and composers.

The course has been personally edited by Leopold Godowsky, foremost piano teacher of New York. Collaborating with him were Leo Sowerby, Godfried Galston, Edgar Stillman Kelly, Emerson Whithorne and other outstanding living artists.

The Progressive Series teaches the principles of music clearly and simply and contains the vital facts. Therefore the pupil learns to play intelligently and in a shorter time than is otherwise possible.

Complete information may be obtained from Mrs. Wellborn. Parents interested are asked to call during this week.

Get Rid of Malaria!
Banish Chills and Fever!

To conquer Malaria, you must do two things: (1) Destroy the infection in the blood. (2) Build up the blood to overcome the effects and to fortify against further attack. There is one medicine that does these two things and that is Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic! The tasteless quinine in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic destroys the malarial infection in the blood while the iron builds up the blood. Thousands of people have conquered Malaria with the aid of Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. In addition to being a noted remedy for Malaria, it is also an excellent tonic of general use. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and contains nothing harmful. Even children like it and they can take it safely. For sale by all stores. New two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 2½ more for your money.

Grace After Drouth
When from this hand a bounteous board,
Bright from the reaping, blest my board,
Did we not thank Thee, Lord?
Now that the harvesting is spare,
Accept for this more frugal fare
As generous a prayer,
For just as nature's ample yield
In other years, from fold and field,
Thine abundance reveals,
So now these lesser fruits of earth,
Meagerly garnered by their dearth,
Teach what thy gifts are worth.

Taylor Is Freed in Co-Ed's Slaying

Found Not Guilty for the Death of Faye New at Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. —(AP)— In a courtroom that was deathly silent, a Jefferson county jury Sunday afternoon announced it had reached a verdict acquitting Harold Taylor, 28, of slaying his companion on an automobile ride. Faye New, 19 year old co-ed.

The rustle of paper could be heard in every section of the room as C. E. Wood, foreman of the jury, which had the case 26 hours, unfolded the verdict and read, "We the jury, find the defendant not guilty."

The silent court waited for a few seconds and then the sob of Taylor, freed of the charge, and his attorney, Moral Montgomery, carried through the courtroom. His father, Marvin Montgomery, former city comptroller, took his tall son in his arms and other relatives crowded forward, embracing Taylor and his attorney.

side constantly during the trial, rushed to their son and threw their arms around him sobbing audibly.

Judge Tom Pace had warned the spectator in the crowded courtroom that there must be no demonstration, but many of the crowd cheered.

The judge ordered the court bailiff to take the names of the demonstrators.

A tense silence settled upon the audience, many of them University of Oklahoma students, as the jury announced it had reached a verdict and filed in. As Merle DeLong, court clerk opened the envelope and read the verdict of acquittal, Myers' head dropped forward.

Myers had told friends that if he were acquitted of the girl's death he would return to the university this fall. His fraternity brothers have offered him his old job in a fraternity kitchen where he was working his way through college when he met Marian, the pretty daughter of a university professor.

Taxpayers through the calling of the National Guard, had to foot a bill of $150,000.

In addition, there were deaths, injuries, much property damage, losses to thousands of workers not directly involved in the same dispute, and the loss of much business, some of which will never return.

All this makes a pretty heavy bill for the community to pay. Almost any kind of peaceful settlement would have been cheaper than that in the long run.

Johnny Dobbs Dies at Charlotte, N. C.

Veteran Manager Southern League Baseball Clubs Passes Away

CHARLOTTE, N. C. —(AP)— John Gordon Dobbs, who managed teams in the Southern association for 22 years, died here Sunday from a heart attack.

Dobbs, one of the few members of the old baseball school remaining in active service in the minors, was part owner of the Charlotte club of the Piedmont league. He was partner of the late Wilbert Robinson.

Dobbs fell ill Saturday night while returning from Atlanta with George Gunther, business manager of the Charlotte club. Death came in a Charlotte hospital at 3:15 p.m. Sunday.

Relatives said they did not know his age. He was born in Chattanooga, Tenn., and first played semi-professional baseball there when he was 16.

Later he performed as an outfielder with the Brooklyn and Cincinnati clubs of the National League. In 1910 he started his long service as manager when he took charge of the Montgomery club where he remained four years.

Then he transferred to New Orleans where he remained nine years, during which time his clubs won four pennants in the Southern association. In 1922 he switched to Memphis for two years, winning the flag in 1924.

Hitler Opposed To Women in Politics

Condemns Women's Rights in Speech to 2,000 Politicians

NURNBERG, Germany — (AP)— The idea of woman's rights in politics was condemned by Chancellor Hitler as "a product of decadent Jewish intellectualism."

The German leader derided the mixing of women in political matters in a speech to 2,000 women politicians. They were Nazi organizers here for the party convention and they applauded his statements energetically.

Hitler told them: "Liberalism has a large number of points for women's equality. The Nazi program for women has but one: This is a child."

"While man makes his supreme sacrifice on the field of battle, woman fights her supreme battle for her nation when she gives life to a child. The conception of so-called woman's equality is a product of decadent Jewish intellectualism."

Hitler added that he believed parliamentary life tended to degrade and desecrate women.

Speaks to Boys
Der Fuehrer's interest in the birth of children in the German nation was carried even further in the day by 60,000 active evidences of his prom-tion of the German youth campaign. The 60,000 were cheering little boys, all in uniform, who marched with military precision into the stadium and listened attentively as der Fuehrer outlined for them the code of life he wished them to follow.

"We want to be a peace-loving people," he said, "but, at the same time courageous."

"We want our people to be honoring; to that end you must from earliest childhood learn the conception of honor."

"We want to be a proud people and you must be proud; proud to be the youthful members of the greatest nation. We want an obedient people, and you must learn to practice obedience. We want a people that is not soft but hard as flint, and we want you from early youth to learn to overcome hardships and privations."

"There must be no classes or class distinctions among our people, and you must never let the idea of class distinction take root among you."

"All we expect of the Germany of the future, we expect of you. We shall pass on, but Germany will live in you."

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NO. 19
Referred to the People by the General Assembly in regular session assembled, 1933.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Arkansas, and by the Senate of the State of Arkansas, a majority of all members elected to each House agreeing thereto:

That the following is hereby proposed as an Amendment to the Constitution of the State of Arkansas, and upon being submitted to the electors of the State for approval or rejection at the next general election for Senators and Representatives, if a majority of the electors voting thereon, at such an election adopt such Amendment, the same shall become a part of the Constitution of the State of Arkansas, to-wit:

ARTICLE 5 of the Constitution of the State of Arkansas be amended by adding thereto the following:

SECTION I. Not less than a majority of the members of each House of the General Assembly may enact a law.

SECTION II. None of the rates for property, excise, privilege or personal taxes, now levied shall be increased by the General Assembly except after the approval of the qualified electors voting thereon at an election, or in case of an emergency, by the votes of three-fourths of the members elected to each House of the General Assembly.

SECTION III. Excepting monies raised or collected for educational purposes, highway purposes, to pay Confederate pensions and the just debts of the State, the General Assembly is hereby prohibited from appropriating or expending more than the sum of Two and One-half Million Dollars for all purposes, for any biennial period; provided the limit herein fixed may be exceeded by the votes of three-fourths of the members elected to each House of the General Assembly.

SECTION IV. In making appropriations for any biennial period, the General Assembly shall first pass the General Appropriation Bill provided for in Section 20 of Article 5 of the Constitution, and no other appropriation bill may be enacted before that shall have been done.

SECTION V. No expense shall be incurred or authorized for either House except by a bill duly passed by both Houses and approved by the Governor.

Nashville Slayer Gets 7-Year Term

Carl Shuffield Convicted of Second Degree Murder

NASHVILLE, Ark.—A jury in circuit court found Carl Shuffield, aged 22, guilty of second degree murder and fixed his sentence at seven years in the penitentiary here Saturday.

Shuffield was indicted on a first degree murder charge as a result of the killing of Luther Arnold in Nashville last April 22. Shuffield also wounded Henry Arnold, brother of the victim.

Shuffield's defense was that he shot the brothers when they entered his home and attacked him following a drinking bout.

Witnesses for the prosecution testified that Shuffield, while drunk, had attacked his wife and that the Arnold brother entered Shuffield's home in response to Mrs. Shuffield's cries for help.

with this Amendment are hereby repealed insofar as they are in conflict herewith, and this Amendment shall be self-executing and shall take and have full effect immediately upon its adoption by the electors of the State.

The above resolution was filed in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Arkansas on the 30th day of January, 1933.

Each elector may vote for, or against, the above proposed Amendment.
